Message from Maria

Dear friends;

As the debate on legalization continues to evolve, it's important to consider the implications of marijuana policies. In my area of expertise, I focus on public health and the impact of social determinants of health on substance use. The question of whether marijuana legalization should be considered has been a topic of much discussion. The focus of our conversations around addiction, criminalization, and trauma needs to be on prevention and resources, not on punishment and a simplistic view of the individual.

There are many important components to this conversation, and it's crucial that we approach it with a deep understanding of the complex issues at play.

The survey results are positive and show good decision-making in our community. However, we need to remain vigilant and proactive in our efforts to address this issue. The discussion around what drives behavior is crucial for understanding how marijuana legalization might affect our communities and our future. We need to have conversations around prevention and provide support and resources to those who need it.

It is important that accurate messaging around the real risks of marijuana use is effectively communicated. THC consumption by minors is a major concern and awareness and education are critical. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.

The THC content in marijuana today is more concentrated than in the past and may not fully understand the product they are consuming. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.

There are many important components to this conversation, and it's crucial that we approach it with a deep understanding of the complex issues at play.

It is important that accurate messaging around the real risks of marijuana use is effectively communicated. THC consumption by minors is a major concern and awareness and education are critical. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.

The THC content in marijuana today is more concentrated than in the past and may not fully understand the product they are consuming. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.

The THC content in marijuana today is more concentrated than in the past and may not fully understand the product they are consuming. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.

It is important that accurate messaging around the real risks of marijuana use is effectively communicated. THC consumption by minors is a major concern and awareness and education are critical. THC consumption by minors has been linked to increased risk of addiction, impaired judgment, and behavioral problems.